HEALTHY BILLABONGS ARE A PROPERTY ASSET

The Goulburn River is an ancient landform. In consequence its path has changed many times creating an enormous collection of billabongs.

You only have to look at a Google map of a typical section between say Molesworth and Alexandra to recognise the significant number of billabongs created as the river has changed its course over the centuries.

In fact when the book on the history of Molesworth was produced some years ago the name Whanregarwen was interpreted to mean a place of billabongs.

Members of the Yea River Catchment Landcare group were recently afforded the opportunity to see how creative management of river billabongs can be incorporated within a whole farm development plan.

The group visited the 54 ha, or 140 acre river frontage property of Ken and Di Foletta on Whanregarwen Road on a "farm walk". The Foletta's acquired the property in 2002 as a rundown holding complete with an old house, sheds and poor fencing.

They have sought information and ideas from numerous sources to create a holding which is now highly productive, able to be run easily as a cattle property and to protect the billabongs and to encourage revegetation.

As Ken explained they also wanted their property to be an enjoyable place to live (for themselves and their cattle!) with an attractive outlook and presentation.

Several years ago they built their striking new house which overlooks the largest billabong on the property. When they began the billabong which they dubbed 'blackbong' had effectively dried up largely as a result of the long drought. It was also full of debris, many weeds and had no value as a bird habitat let alone as a prominent feature of the property.

As an interim measure they employed a contractor with an excavator to deepen a modest area which did result in some water being held. The billabong was later to fill completely when the drought broke and the River was in high flow. The property's Goulburn River bank frontage had also been significantly damaged by cattle; there were widespread areas of willows and hawthorns while the other billabongs on the property were also in poor condition.

With assistance from the Goulburn Broken Catchment Management Authority* a whole farm approach was devised.

This included fencing off the Goulburn River frontage, removing the willows and hawthorns by a chemical and mechanical approach and creating a new internal fencing system to facilitate stock handling and movement.

Also a stock watering reticulation system was installed drawing its source from the river and the many billabongs were fenced off to protect them and to encourage revegetation of their surrounds.

Extensive planting was also done using both native and introduced tree varieties to create bird habitat and to enhance the overall presentation of the property. The main billabong closest to their house is now a sparkling asset as it quickly filled after the drought ended.

Ken says he has identified more than fifteen bird varieties which either make the billabong their permanent or a transitional home on their migratory flights.

As a key land form of the local area the Goulburn River billabongs are a resource that can be easily conserved and managed as a key part of a whole farm or property development plan. What Ken and Di Foletta have achieved is a tribute to their energy, conservation values and their desire to make a productive use of their property and its unique features.

*The Goulburn Broken River Catchment Management Authority is able to offer advice, design ideas and in some instances limited financial support for approved works. Landowners should consult their local Catchment Authority office for further information.

The large billabong was once dubbed the "blackbong" due to its poor condition. It is now restored as a major bird habitat as well as an important visual aspect of their property.

WHITEHEADS CREEK LANDCARE LIVES ON

WHCLC had their AGM last Friday at their hall and it was preceded by a talk by Claire Wade from the DPI on Soil Health and Testing.

We started with a BBQ and there were 20 people there for the talk and hands on demo of soil testing. We learnt how to test our soils on various parts of our land and the impact of topography and vegetation on these soils and how to interpret the results and make appropriate changes. We can also get soil kits on loan from DPI and then they will come and help us interpret the results.

We elected a new committee with some new young blood with a new secretary. Chris Freeman has taken on this position and her husband has also joined the committee. What an asset to have the next generation of Freemans in our group. It was a great night and we look forward to a good year ahead.

Our prime project is to complete the corridor planting in Lambing Gully Road but have also some other projects in the pipe line.

Cheers Carolyn Braun

BOOK REVIEW

Joel & Cat set the story straight - Nick Earls & Rebecca Sparrow

There have been a couple of these joint author stories written in recent years (Dear Venny, Dear Saffron and Hot Mail are two that spring to mind) and this is the latest offering from two great Australian authors. Sworn enemies Joel and Cat suddenly find themselves thrust together to do a tandem story, alternatively writing paragraphs a night about, for two weeks.

Not only do they loathe each other they suddenly discover that their "single" parents have met each other and started dating.

A very funny and very clever story. In fact all 3 titles mentioned are great reads. By Pauline Roberts

WILDLIFE RECOVERY AFTER BLACK SATURDAY

The Yea Wetlands Committee are very pleased to bring to you a wonderful story of recovery. The Project—Focus on Fauna, is an initiative of the Upper Goulburn Landcare Network which set out to survey and record the wildlife that was returning to private properties after the Black Saturday Bushfires. The results of the year long survey, undertaken in 2011 will amaze you. See some wonderful film footage and listen to David Wakefield, a keen amateur naturalist explain the program.

Finally, be really impressed by the story of the Powerful Owls, as told by land owner Ron Litjens. The survey uncovered a family of Powerful Owls on his property and Ron has been monitoring them ever since. ## NEGLECTING RABBIT CONTROL COSTS

A company has been found guilty in the Seymour Magistrates' Court of failing to comply with the requirements of a Land Management Notice to control rabbits on their property in the Gooram area.

Department of Primary Industries (DPI) Biosecurity Officer Jaye Caldwell said DPI officers served the Land Management Notice on the company in May 2011. The notice required the company to control rabbits on their property.

"A subsequent inspection of the Gooram property in September 2011 revealed that insufficient control works had been completed to satisfactorily meet the requirements of the notice," Mr Caldwell said. As a result, Magistrate Murphy found the matter proven and ordered that the company be placed under a six month good behaviour order and pay costs to DPI. "In Victoria, land owners are required to take all reasonable steps to prevent the spread of, and as far as possible eradicate, established pest animals on their property under the Catchment and Land Protection Act 1994," Mr Caldwell said. "The community and DPI have worked hard in recent years to reduce the impact of rabbits in the Gooram, Ruffy and Highlands areas. "If left unmanaged, the Gooram property would have compromised the extensive efforts of surrounding landowners."
