JUST A FEW BLOKES HAVING A BEER AND A CHAT.....

The Men's Shed is a mainstream movement that has the support of all levels of government, 'Beyond Blue', and a host of other agencies that are tasked with identifying & supporting male mental health issues such as social isolation and depression.

The first official Men's Shed was opened at Tongala, Victoria in 1998 and there are now 930 of them registered across Australia.

In winter the brazier is an essential component of Secret Men's Business gatherings

Whether or not they were influenced by the early Men's Shed concept is a moot point but in 2002 a few local blokes from Caveat decided to start getting together each month for a beer and a chin-wag.

Rather than rotate through each others' places they reckoned that it'd be good to have a fixed venue for their gathering and as luck would have it, the old Caveat Church became available.....which is a story that will be told in these pages over coming months.

The mischievous title was actually bestowed upon the Caveat group by a lady who attended one of the early get-togethers and noted that she was the lone female in the group. She remarked that a lot of the discussions sounded to her like "secret men's business".

Whereas the official Men's Sheds demand a constitution, office-bearers, and a raft of compliance with safe operating practices; at Secret Men's Business there are no rules except that everyone should relax and enjoy a drink and a chat with mates and other blokes who they may not otherwise see from month to month.

The other icon is the BBQ that serves up a simple sausage in bread Spend an hour or so at the Caveat Church grotto and you'll hear talk about the weather, cattle prices, bushfire threats, football, pasture growth, the state of the roads and most importantly the state of health of anyone in the district who might need a bit of support.

At 5:30pm on the last Thursday of each month anywhere from 10 to 20 locals turn up and it's not just the old blokes; Secret Men's Business also provides a welcome environment for our younger guys who otherwise might struggle to get off the farm due to long working days and after hours responsibilities with young families.

It could be described as spiritual but its definitely not religious, it's non-political and it's a big contributor to our district's health & wellbeing.

FARMING & ENVIRONMENT

'HEALTHY HECTARES' offers HEAPS of HELP

A country property is a great change of pace for many living busy Melbourne lives. The chance to slow down, breathe deeply and inhale eucalyptus instead of fumes, maybe grow some vegies or raise some animals. After years of visiting properties, many new landholders I meet express their delight in the space, the views, wildlife encounters and often mention they would like to earn some money from their property.

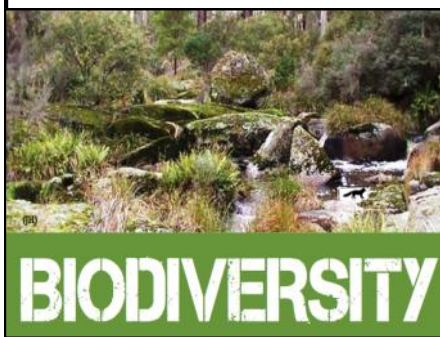

Just how much can you earn from a small acreage, and what are some of the land management challenges you might face on your block of land?

Planning your property is your first big step – identifying sensitive areas on your land – watercourses, steep hills and spring soaks. What is your fire risk and what steps will you take to mitigate that risk?

Do you have weed or pest animal issues? Where are existing fences and water points for stock? Will you have animals and what are the legal obligations you will need to address as a property owner? Where is your native vegetation and do you want to create better links for wildlife?

It's not easy navigating each of these questions on your own. We hope to help through the Healthy Hectares program by sign-posting you to information or local people that can help with your questions. We hope you'll take the time to visit the website, www.healthyhectares.org.au, read through the booklet, or join us at a training day – these are listed under the News and Events on the website.

Contact Vikki Lane vikki.lane@euroaarboretum.com.au for the booklet publication or further information about the training days.

READERS' WRITES

"I read with interest Stuart Reid's piece in the last edition of the Granite News, and I understand his disappointment with the way certain important topics of conversation are avoided for fear of touching raw nerves.

The good news is that in our area there are opportunities for discussing such important topics with people who may have different views but are prepared to approach difficult topics with an open mind.

U3A Euroa and District (University of the Third Age) offers two 'courses' (monthly 2hr sessions) where participants engage in free discussion on a topic introduced by the course convenor. In the 'Philosopher's Forum' we discuss questions ranging from 'Does Religion Determine Morality' to 'Non-violence' and 'The Happy Life'.

The other course, on 'Comparative Religion', aims to develop a better understanding of the similarities and differences of different religions.

If readers are interested to find out more about U3A and the courses and activities it offers, Program Coordinator

Cheryl Earnshaw 5695 3737
u3aeuroa@gmail.com)

will be happy to provide further information."
